We are thrilled that Lessons from Nature is being complimented by many education and environmental education organisations. It has received great compliments from AQA, the Council for Learning Outside the Classroom and Education Scotland. Julie Wilson, National Development Officer Outdoor Learning, from Education Scotland explains:

“Development officers at Education Scotland were impressed by the values based approach you have taken in the materials and also by the focus on environmental, social and economic well-being which builds on strategies for developing ecological literacy and skills for learning, living and working in a complex and changing world”.

Beth Gardener, Chief Executive, from CLOtC:

“These are really valuable materials which fill a gap in provision, giving teachers much needed support to help them tackle the big issues faced by society, and engage young people in real life learning.”
